BEST-SELLERS

Lip Gloss

Given that their favorite lip glosses are called Lust and Orgasm, women across America seem to have one-track minds. In South Carolina and Washington, fruity shades are tools of seduction. Oklahomans slick on a gold-flecked pink to give lips an afterglow. —KATE SULLIVAN

Skin Rehab

You may not need to go to Promises to want a little detox for your skin. A new crop of products claim to detox (a.k.a. deep-clean) skin by countering the effects of too many cocktails and late nights. The Chantecaille Detox Clay Mask and Malin+Goetz Detox Face Mask use antibacterial cleansers and mild exfoliants that may allow antioxidants, anti-inflammatories, and moisturizers to penetrate more deeply. Nude Detox Skin Supplements combine herbs and probiotics to help the body flush out excess toxins, which supposedly improves skin's luminosity. While the concept of detox is thrown around loosely in spa land despite any clear scientific definition, these products do have some benefit: "The masks are good deep cleansers, and taking the supplements may result in clearer skin," says Amy B. Lewis, a clinical assistant professor of dermatology at Yale University School of Medicine. However, she adds, "You may be able to achieve similar detoxifying effects simply by drinking a lot of water." —HANNAH MORRILL
